

History and Tradition in Constitutional IP cases

Rebecca Tushnet

Harvard Law School

There are indications that the "history and tradition" approach the Supreme Court applied to gun rights and abortion restrictions may be coming for First Amendment doctrine. In IP cases, it already has, with the Court using historical analogies for the right of publicity, copyright, and trademark. What lessons can we learn from the IP cases?