

Midjohodo Franck Gloglo is a legal scholar, a graduate from Laval University in Canada with a Doctor of Laws (LL.D.) degree, having, prior to that, completed advanced legal studies with two Masters, respectively in Industrial Property Law and Health Industries from Université Paris-Saint Denis, and Common Law and Comparative Law from Université Paris-René Descartes, both in France. He also received three Certificates in Intellectual Property Law and Economics from the Justus-Liebig University of Giessen, the Franklin Pierce Center for Intellectual Property at University of New Hampshire School of Law, and the WIPO Academy in co-operation with the GIPA-USPTO. Dr. Gloglo is an alumnus of University of Abomey-Calavi in Benin, where he completed his undergraduate legal studies with a Licence and a Maîtrise in Business Law and Judicial Careers. His research focuses on Intellectual Property and Biotechnology Law, Health Law and International Trade Law, on which he has published in the Bulletin de droit économique, the European Intellectual Property Review, the WIPO Journal, and the Quebec Journal of International Law, among others, in addition to numerous conference presentations he has made at international settings.